Post-election:
A Bioethics Agenda for a New Era

President-elect Obama has pledged to make health care reform a priority for his administration, and Senate leaders are moving forward with their own proposals. It is clear that many bioethical decisions that fall under the broad umbrella of health care reform will be made in the upcoming session of Congress. Please join Mary Crowley, The Hastings Center’s director of public affairs and communications, and three of our research scholars in a conversation about some of the issues that may not be the most obvious, but could be the most compelling.

Please visit Center’s website www.thehastingscenter.org

• Introduction: The political landscape and health care reform.
  Mary Crowley

• Stem cell research: Why is this still an issue?
  Josephine Johnston

• Chronic Disease and End of Life Care: A chance to get it right?
  Nancy Berlinger

• Public Health: Will fixing health “care” make us healthy?
  Erika Blacksher

Tuesday, December 9, 2008 • 6:30-8:30 PM
Presentation and discussion: 6:30-8:00 PM; Reception: 8:00-8:30 PM

Admission is free. Seating is limited.
R.S.V.P. to Tina Settembrino at 845-424-4040, ext. 202 or SettembrinoT@thehastingscenter.org

The Hastings Center is located on Route 9D in Garrison, New York, between St. Basil’s Academy and the Phillipstown Park (1.3 miles north of Route 403 and 3 miles south of the Village of Cold Spring).